Texas Secretary of State

ELECTIONS DIVISION

NEW LAW – House Bill 493

Adopting a Voting System and Choosing Locations

Who adopts the voting system?

For a separate primary election, each party's county executive committee is the authority responsible for adopting the voting system for that party's primary. (Sec. 123.001).

For a joint primary election, the county election officer is the authority responsible for adopting the voting system for the joint primary. (Sec. 172.126(f)).

Adopting Election Day Polling Locations

Separate Primary

- In a separate primary, the county chair designate the location of the polling places unless the polling place is located in a consolidated precinct. [Sec. 43.003]
- The county executive committee will determine whether to consolidate any county election precincts, and will determine the location of the polling place for the consolidated precinct. [Secs. 42.009, 43.003].
- Both parties holding a primary election may use the same polling places for their primary elections even if they are holding their primary elections separately instead of jointly.

Joint Primary

- In a joint primary election, the polling places that are used in the general election for state and county officers will be used for the joint primary election. [Sec. 172.126(a)]
- The county election officer determines whether to consolidate precincts and the location of the polling place for the consolidated precinct. [Sec. 172.126(b)]
- To the extent possible, the polling place selected for the joint primary election should be capable of accommodating the precinct conventions of each political party.

NEW LAW – SB 985

Allows for combination of precincts in the primary election by the county executive committee if:

- Changes in county election precinct boundaries due to a redistricting plan result in county election precincts with fewer than 3,000 registered voters, in which case precincts can be combined up to 5,000 registered voters; OR
- For counties that do not participate in the countywide polling place program, the county executive committee of a political party may combine precincts if there is no suitable building available for use as a polling place in one or more precincts and the location of the combined polling place adequately serves the voters of the combined precinct.
 - Combined precinct under this procedure may not contain more than 10,000 registered voters.
- More than two precincts may be combined under either provision if the combined precincts are contiguous and otherwise qualify.

Countywide and Hand Counting

A political party that chooses to hand count is not permitted to use countywide polling places during the primary.

Texas Election Code 65.014 provides that precinct returns are prepared at individual polling locations.

Hand Counting and Contracting

The county may only establish countywide polling places if:

All parties nominating by primary election agree to use countywide polling locations.

If one party is conducting a hand count, both parties are required to conduct precinct-based voting

This would mean that neither party would be permitted to use countywide polling places for its individual primary election
